

NAPS Class of 1967

SITREP 013

<http://www.naps1967.com>

We are pleased to report the recent edition of the Naval Academy Alumni Association's magazine Shipmate (January - February 2013) includes a feature article titled, "NAPS: Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." The timing of our reunion and the summary submitted in its wake could not have been better. Unable to print the After Action Report in its entirety, the editorial staff requested an otherwise brief account and a representative photograph to complement the NAPS article.

Please find a copy of the complete "NAPS: Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow" article and reunion sidebar summary / group photograph attached. A letter posted to the USNA '71 class secretary describing our NAPS '67 reunion in more detail appears in the same Shipmate edition under the '71 class column and is attached herein.

As a matter of peripheral interest, a statistic in the body of the feature article underscores the gradual effects of time, tide, and transition in all aspects of present day life at NAPS and beyond. Among the 222 NAPSters entering the Naval Academy with the class of 2016, only 27 were enlisted. By stark contrast, every NAPSter in our day was an enlisted man with a set of orders and a multi-year obligation to match.

Change happens!
